Two of the eight appointed member vacancies were filled. BRUCE BURGESS, a Professional Engineer from Calgary, will represent the Alumni Association, and TED HOBBS will represent the Graduate Students' Association. Appointed representatives of the Deans' Council, the Board of Governors, and the Students' Council have not yet been named.

REPORT ON PHYSICAL PLANNING

The Task Force on Physical Planning has withdrawn the report it presented at the March 8 Senate meeting. At the earlier meeting the report had evoked criticism from W. D. NEAL, Vice-President (Planning and Development) and the task force had agreed to review its recommendations. It subsequently concluded that the issues raised should not be discussed in a public forum such as the Senate meeting and that the report should be withdrawn.

UNIVERSITY CENTRE

BILL THORSELL, Executive Officer of the Senate, reported that display space in Edmonton Centre has been made available to the University. The first displays, by the departments of Drama and Mechanical Engineering, are expected to be completed by the end of August if funds can be found to finance the displays.

TASK FORCE ON EXTENSION

A task force designed "to discover the public mind concerning the future of the Extension function" at the University has been established under the chairmanship of DORA MC CULLOCH. Other members of the group are: MARY JANE SHAW, Vice-Chairman; FIL FRASER, DOREEN IBSEN, Mrs. ROBERT JOHNSTON, Mrs. M. J. PARKER, DANIEL THACHUK, Mrs. HELEN VERDIN, and NORMAN WILDGOOSE.

The task force has begun its deliberations and will report to the Senate in the late fall.

BRIAN HOCKING 1914-1974

BRIAN HOCKING, Professor and former Chairman of Entomology, died May 23, 1974 at the age of 59. His death brings to an end a career that included many valuable contributions in scientific research, education, and public service. It was in recognition of these accomplishments that Dr. Hocking was awarded the Entomological Society of Canada Gold Medal for 1973.

Dr. Hocking was born in London and received much of his education there. He held a BSc (Honors) and the Associateship of the Royal College of Science, an MSc from The University of Alberta, and a PhD from the University of London.

He gained his first experience in entomology during World War II when he served as an entomologist in the Indian Army, whose war efforts were being hindered by pests in timber and stored products. In 1946 he came to Alberta as an assistant professor. It was here, under the guidance of the late E. H. STRICKLAND, that he developed his wide range of interests in entomology. His research into biting flies led to publications on methods of their control with insecticides and on personal protection against their attacks. From there, he turned to questions about dispersal, laying the groundwork for much of the work on insect flight that has been carried out since. As a natural extension of his flight studies, Dr. Hocking examined the relationship between the insect and the plant, which supplies the fuel for the insect's flight.

With his keen sense of scientific curiosity, each observation led to another study. As his publications list grew, so did his reputation as one of the world's leading entomologists.

In 1965 Dr. Hocking first edited Quaestiones entomologicae, a periodical record of entomological investigations which is published by the University. It is now in its ninth volume. In addition to these efforts, he supervised 30 graduate students during his tenure here and is credited with making the Department of Entomology one of the leading centres of graduate training and research in entomology. But his contributions did not stop there. Convinced that Alberta's high school students should receive an improved education in biology, he wrote a number of laboratory manuals to be used in the schools. His attempts to do the same thing for a broader audience resulted in a number of articles and three books, The Ultimate Science: a layman's account of Biology; Biology or Oblivion; and Six-Legged Science. He also made countless appearances on television, at public meetings, and on radio to broaden community understanding of and interest in entomology.

J. W. RAVEN 1920-1974

J. W. RAVEN, Director of Housing and Food Services, died May 24, 1974 after a lengthy illness. He was 53 years of age.

Mr. Raven grew up in Lumsden, Saskatchewan. Shortly after completion of his schooling, he accepted a position as secretary-treasurer of Canadian Propane Ltd. and Subsidiaries. In 1959 he became comptroller for M & P Transport Ltd. and in 1965 he was appointed chief accountant for City Savings and Trust. Two years later he joined the staff at the University as an administrative officer.

His appointment as director came in 1970, one year after the official opening of the three residences in the Lister Hall complex. As director, Mr. Raven was responsible not only for the operation of the food and housing services on campus, but also for Michener Park, the married student housing south of the campus. In recent years he also developed a summer rental program through which tourists may rent residence hall rooms that would otherwise remain vacant. Last summer the rentals earned $250,000 for the University.

R. M. SHAW 1881-1974

ROBERT MC LEOD SHAW, Professor Emeritus of Bacteriology, died May 19, 1974. He was 92.

Dr. Shaw was born in Victoria Corner, New Brunswick. He obtained his BA at Dalhousie University and his MD at McGill University before his education was interrupted by World War I. During the war he served as a Major with the 15th Battalion, 48th Highlanders of Canada. He then resumed his studies at McGill and received his CM and DPH.

In 1921 he was appointed assistant bacteriologist in the Provincial Laboratory here. Six years later he began teaching bacteriology and hygiene and became a full professor in 1930. In 1939 Dr. Shaw was named acting head of the Department of Bacteriology and acting Provincial Bacteriologist, serving during the absence of A. C. RANKIN, the dean who guided the Faculty of Medicine through its early years. In 1945 he became head of both Bacteriology and the Provincial Lab.

Dr. Shaw intended to retire in 1948 but was convinced to accept re-appointment for "just one more year." He retired in 1950.

During his tenure at the University and Provincial Laboratory, Dr. Shaw published research findings on a variety of subjects including the Paul-Bunnell agglutination test for infectious mononucleosis; the relation of a certain type of bacteria to sickness among ducks in Alberta; and, for the Edmonton Board of Health, the use of Roccal as a disinfectant for beer glasses.

AUCC QUESTIONS GOVERNMENT PROPOSALS

The AUCC Committee of Executive Heads has presented the following submission to the Secretary of State. The submission comments upon the proposed changes in the structure and responsibilities of the federal granting councils.

The Committee of Executive Heads of the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada (AUCC) wishes to bring to your attention its observations on the proposed reorganization of the granting councils announced in the speech from the throne and elaborated in related documents.

While there is a lack of details in these documents, nevertheless the thrust of the proposal seems clear. Our comments are based on our interpretation of these documents as to the intent and impact of the proposed reorganization.

The objectives of the councils as identified by the federal government are:

1. to encourage excellence in curiosity-oriented research as well as research which may contribute to the advancement of national objectives;
2. to provide a base of advanced knowledge;

3. to assist in the selective concentration of research activities;
4. to maintain a basic capacity for research training; and
5. to take account of regional considerations in scientific capability.

We readily concur in the appropriateness of the stated purposes for the granting councils. However, we remain unconvinced that the proposed "organizational changes" are necessary to reach these objectives. In our view these are the same ends which the present councils have striven to achieve and we do not believe that they can be more satisfactorily advanced by the proposed reorganization.

The documents referred to suggest that, because of their disciplinary approach, the present councils have not adequately covered all recognized research disciplines and that the increasing importance of interdisciplinary research demands increased financial assistance.

We offer two observations on these suggestions. It is our understanding that the present councils have made good progress in respect of both these matters and, further, we do not see how reorganization of the councils can, in itself, improve the situation. We do agree that additional financial assistance would promote interdisciplinary research just as it would in single disciplinary areas.

The universities are concerned, as is the government, that an efficient granting mechanism be maintained. We fear that a drastic revision of the structure, policies, and procedures, if such be contemplated, could be so disruptive as to impair the effectiveness of the granting mechanisms. Policies and procedures have evolved over the years in diverse ways to meet the individual requirements of the councils, and their personnel have developed expertise in their respective administrative procedures. We are concerned that the high quality of the councils and their relative freedom from external administrative controls be continued into the future.

We have some misgivings about the proposed separation of the support mechanism for the humanities and social sciences from that of the performing arts in the present Canada Council and the separation of support for the natural sciences from the laboratories of the present National Research Council. There are important cross-overs amongst the arts, humanities, and social sciences, and we would not want to see limitations placed on the present scope for interdisciplinary activity. Also, we believe there are useful interactions between the granting functions and the in-house research of the National Research Council which are important to the universities. The association of these functions has been of value both within the councils and the universities.

If the proposed reorganization of the councils is established policy, then we urge that the legislation ensure a minimum of disruption in the mechanisms of funding, and that every effort be made to maintain the high quality of the councils with their experienced support staffs. We urge that appointees to the councils be men and women of recognized intellectual stature and reputation, and that both academic and senior administrative personnel be included in representation from the university community. We urge also the retention of the peer system in the granting of awards.

The proposal to appoint an Inter-Council Co-ordinating Committee has given rise to considerable concern in that it may add a bureaucratic level to existing administrative structures and processes which may bend the granting function to serve the requirements of the federal authorities at the expense of the needs of the regions of Canada and of basic research. In particular, our concern arises out of the proposal that the Co-ordinating Committee "advise on the allocation of funds among the councils" and "co-ordinate and advise on council programs, as well as those of individual federal government departments, in support of university research."

In discussions with the Minister of State for Science and Technology, we were reassured to learn that it is anticipated that each of the three granting councils will report directly to a minister. Nevertheless, we believe that if the proposed Co-ordinating Committee is created and is to report to the Minister of State for Science and Technology, then, in view of the responsibilities assigned to it, the question of membership is all important, and we urge that it include senior university administrators amongst its membership.

We are not clear as to the precise intent of the proposal that the Co-ordinating Committee "standardized granting practices." If it is intended that the Committee should achieve uniformity, and we do not view this as being either necessary or desirable, it may fail in its purpose.

Different practices amongst the councils have arisen because of the diversity of the disciplines being served. If there must be standardization then it should not impair the flexibility of the granting procedures or limit the discretion of the councils to provide an appropriate level of funding for each of the disciplines.

LEARNED SOCIETIES, 1975

At this time next year the usually placid summer campus will be characterized by a much more active pace as the University welcomes participants in the Learned Societies Conference 1975. The meetings will take place
